Recent mentions:

At the G20 in Rio de Janeiro, U.S. Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen expressed her support for Ninety One's Emerging Markets Transition Debt (EMTD) initiative, which aims to provide companies in emerging markets with commercial financing to make critical investments in low-emission infrastructure and heavy emitters equipped with a credible transition plan. Initial commitments have reached US$400 million, pending approvals including those from ILN members CDPQ and OMERS alongside UK institutional investors Legal & General Investment Management and Wiltshire Pension Fund.

In her address, Secretary Yellen said this new initiative advances key Treasury priorities, stating "For many of the investors involved, this initiative represents a significant step forward in expanding their investment in emerging markets... It shows we are making tangible progress in our ambition to increase private capital mobilization for emerging markets, with hopefully much more progress ahead."

Collective Investment scheme funds are generally medium to long term investments. The value of participatory interests may go down as well as up and past performance is not necessarily a guide to the future. Funds are traded at ruling prices and can engage in borrowing and scrip lending. The fund may borrow up to 10% of its market value to bridge insufficient liquidity. A schedule of charges, fees and adviser fees is available on request from the manager. Additional adviser fees may be paid and if so, are subject to the relevant FAIS disclosure requirements.
